

Educational field Trips

at Oregon Ridge Nature Center

Animals and their Habitats

Meet some of the animals that call Maryland home. Students will identify their living spaces in the park as they explore the trails, wildlife and habitat needs of the forest, stream and meadow communities.

Appropriate for all ages.

Creek to Stream to Bay

Delve into a tributary of the Chesapeake Bay watershed. Students will uncover the creatures that inhabit the stream and determine the quality of the water by analyzing what they find.

Recommended for grades 3+, April through mid-October

Native Americans

This program provides a hands-on exploration into the lives of some of Maryland's first residents. Students will investigate the everyday lives of the woodland Algonquian Natives and their use of natural resources.

Insects and their kin

Investigate the diverse realm of insects and pollinators. Students will hike to the meadow to observing hoppers, crawlers, stingers and fliers while learning why they are so important to our ecosystem. April through mid-October

Maple Sugaring

Experience the making of maple syrup and maple sugar. Student will learn the history of maple sugaring, tree identification, along with tapping and collecting methods from the past to current day.

Mid-February through mid-March

Rocks Rock!

Practice identification techniques for rocks and minerals and learn how they affect our daily lives at hands-on stations. Students will go outside to explore the lasting effects of the mining history at Oregon Ridge.

Predator and Prey

Students will study the interrelationships between predator and prey through close-up observation. We'll head outdoors to search for predators and their prey and observe special wildlife survival adaptations.

Reptiles and Amphibians

Meet and differentiate reptiles and amphibians along with other animals that inhabit the park. Students will spend time on the trails discovering where they live, what they eat, and how they protect themselves. Late March through early October.
